January 27, 2006

According to manager magazin's "Imageprofile 2006", the MAN Group ranks top in the Steel Engineering sector. In the last rating two years ago, MAN reached fifth place. The ranking is based on a survey among 2,500 industry executives.

In the "Automobile Industry" category (led by Porsche), the MAN subsidiary MAN Nutzfahrzeuge captured fifth place, moving up two places compared with 2004. In the overall ranking of all the companies evaluated, MAN also made a leap forward, MAN Nutzfahrzeuge coming twenty-ninth (2004: 58th) and the MAN Group thirty-third (2004: 70th).

Every two years, this survey is carried out on behalf of "manager magazin" by the Emnid Opinion Research Institute. It evaluates the eight criteria of management quality, innovative competence, communications, employer attractiveness, employee orientation, cost-benefit ratio, profitability and financial strength, as well as growth momentum.
